A first-class education is one of the most valuable gifts that any parent can give to a child. But with costs continuing to rise, putting children through university has become a major financial commitment for many parents.

Some parents will be determined that their child attends only the best university, whilst others will take a more pragmatic approach. Whatever their view, it's going to cost.

So the message is simple – it's never too early to start saving.

To get some idea of the potential costs involved, let's look at Cambridge University in the UK. In 2010-11, international students had to pay tuition fees of £18,573 1 for a science-based undergraduate course. For 2015-16, the same tuition fees will have increased to just under £23,000 2 - that's an increase of over 23% in just 5 years.

If we assume that these fees continue to increase by just 4% each year, in 10 years' time a 3 year course could cost over £105,000, as shown in the table below.

And if that's not enough to get your clients' attention, guess what? - expenses such as college fees, course materials, food, socialising, travel, accommodation will be extra.

Help is at hand. Quantum is an investment plan that aims to build up a lump sum to help meet further education fees in return for a regular premium. In the example, we'd be talking about £670 ($1,053) per month paid over 10 years.

Year Tuition fees USD equivalent³ 2025 - 2026 $53,319 First year £33,925 Second year 2026 - 2027 £35,282 $55,452 Third year 2027 - 2028 £36,693 $57,670 Total £105,900 $166,441

The monthly premium has been calculated using the Quantum illustration system assuming an annual growth rate of 7.5% (inclusive of all Quantum product charges).
